

Feasibility Study for Emergency Declarations Website RFP

Amendment #1 – Answers to Questions – Part 1

Note: Proposal Due Date remains October 23, 2020

- 1) Will the chosen partner for this feasibility study remain qualified and in consideration for future phases of this work if it moves ahead?

Yes, the chosen partner may submit a proposal for the subsequent phase to implement an Emergency Declarations Website, if approved by FHWA.

- 2) On page 2, under Objective, you mention an attached deliverables/document list, however we did not receive any additional attachments. Is this referring to the deliverables outlined within the RFP or can you provide the attachment that's referenced?

Yes, this refers to the deliverables outlined in the RFP.

- 3) Does AASHTO see a need and will there be an opportunity between tasks 2 and 3 to collect additional technical information outside of what is generated during the Task Force Meeting in order to make the most informed recommendation?

AASHTO believes the taskforce members have the subject matter expertise to work with input from the Business Analyst in website design, content delivery and user experience to provide the high level information expected from the deliverables. The selected vendor may collect additional information outside of what is generated during the Task Force meeting, however. In the end, the expected hours and budget should be sufficient to complete the work.
